

MARK TITMARSH & TODD ROBINSON Public Fitting 2011 | MOP Projects, Sydney; SEAM 2011

Public Fitting is located in a cross disciplinary field between art and design, more specifically painting and fashion. The work questions the nature of rigid boundaries between modes of practice showing instead that a convergence of disciplines and conceptual strategies is essential in an age of integrated media. Consequently outcomes in this work were seen to reach across painting, fashion, performance, installation, video and theory.

The aesthetic premise of this work is that the artist and designer can work together to produce a collaborative live performance that combines aspect of the catwalk and the artisanal studio. The work so produced carries aspects of public display and private creativity, pre-prepared choreographic events and chance happenings of the moment. This collaborative work references a significant example of performative making by fashion designer Alexander McQueen, Spring/Summer 1999. In this work the designer presented a white dress which was painted by two robotic arms, normally used in automotive production. While this precedent draws heavily on productive technology in a performative context, Public Fitting embraced a dialogical and participatory approach where discrete practices become entangled in a productive mode of collaborative making.

The catalogue essay from the original exhibition at MOP was reprinted as 'Public Fitting: Wet and Wild Discussions', in The Australasian Journal of Popular Culture, Vol 1, No 3, 2012, pp.383-388. The work was re-presented at SEAM 2011 and the lively discussion after the performance between the two artists and the audience is documented on the official SEAM DVD of the conference. Mark Titmarsh: I am thinking of a spectrum that runs from Alexander McQueen's Robot Paint Dress to the From Alexander McQueerk, biote Phast Drus to the images of Kernyn soncettes nystrop Up biote trucks with pink-coloured water. The first is a moment on the local solution of the solution of the solution of the local solution of the solution of the solution of the local solution of the solution of the solution of the non-local solution water of pink trainingles. However both were not upute twy to Klein norther do the Kenynan refer to splithew stars or pink traingles. However both immunitioning graphical be special in moments in panning Paint in an excessive or centar star denches and exceeds a supporting unified, is stock the colocker, runs away poon down, displaying, almost scaring the humans who colour as a set of the stoce as some stoched by colour. Todd Robinson: When I recall the McOucen dress it essential fashion event, the spectacular production of the fashion moment, a particular kind of staging that fashion hasn't matched since. The model rotates on a circular panel set into the floor and the paint is applied by spray guns deployed Hoor and the point's applied by spray guos deployed by pre-programmed, and hosts used in automotive man-ufacturing its also a peculiar noment in painting the strain of the speculiar noment in painting the strain of the speculiar strain of the speculiar shouldn't be put on your body, you have to wash it end inmediately, with the whole nomenic kind of response to getting paint on you. Paint is generally associated with miss, commorcial painters, shillers, home renorators, but outside of those stancioned the strain of the specific strain of the specific specific strain terms it is al de-tablicing substance. The response to paint and dirt is the same, and is undergirded by a vague sense of shame, which is probably why its used as a ounitive kind of crowd control by the Kenyan it marks you out in some way and it also ruins your clothes up, changes your public impact entirely.

Mark Titmarsh: Paint gets on everything, even in th painter's studio there is constant vigilance to make sure it is staying put in all the right places. It is part of since its swipping that in ain the negate places it its plant of its physical matter that it will attend secretly and furtively. I remember when we did the first tests on place calleo jacket in my studio, I there spint over your back but most of it missed and sprayed across the bit studio hitting doers of works, success cleaning exatt doets tryong something already partially completed and others I did not discover till weeks later Todd Robinson: I was thinking while looking at a Toda Robinson: I was thinking while looking at a dress I am considering for the show and wondering it it was enough as a fashion proposition. I then had a look at the image of the 'bespoke painting' performance done in your studio and recognised how dramatically done in your studio and recognised how dramatically paint (literally) impacts on the garment and effices: the surface. The dress is demure in style, with a faint hint of a 1950s instantal waisted silonotette, with a pencil skirt, and loose fitting blouse. A more away from this kind of figuration could detract from the gature, interrupting the ketting-go of paint. The paint splattered on gamenes, binging a contract, big soloning at the results and thinking about the ponces I restaine Post the results and thinking about the process I realise I've become enamoured with painting and its basic kind of materiality, as opposed to images or objects on the wall.

Intertuming, as opposed to images of topics on time wait. Mark Timassi, and an wondering why toyu think of those bisorical moments when anists become fashion despress and vice verse? I an inthinking of a long line through Short Dehanays, Henri Matisse, Salvador Dali, Jenny Hohzer, Yanessa Beecerde, Spive Fleury and Takashi Marakami' I am alto vondering about the ways art and fashion can sit together or synogise. For example, fashion can be considered an art form, or others can be exhibited in air to considered an art form, or coordes can be exhibited in art museum, as with Saugg Basity, or fashion can be equated with art, as in Issey Miyake, or in another part of the map, art can be printed on clothes like Mondrian's rolations or fashion photographers can be seen as artists, such as Helmut Newton and artists like Gindy Sherman as fashion photographer. Todd Robinson: That is difficult to address because the instances you mention are quite different, even incommensurable. I think the practice of making clothing is quite different from art making. Fashion when it has been considered an art form in the broadest when it has been considered an art form in the broadest sense, as in decourie or warshafe arts, still projects its difference from art. However three are those productive historical moments when collaborations like Salvador Dail and Flas Shaparelli produce a significant curcome for fashion. While others appear to guite productive for art, as with Vanessa Beecord when the draws on the spectrale of fashion, its vencer and solucive power. The public mobility of clothing and its desirability as a commodity have been attractive aspects for artists when they want to move beyond the bounds of the gallery into everyday life. For some the garment might become a platform for visual ideas as with the Yves Saint Laurent Mondrian dress, which is not necessarily a satisfying result for me. By contrast Sonia Delaunay work addresses the notion of an underlying human vitality and a basic carnality in image making which lends itself to the worn form. Likewise Hélio Oiticica leasts steer to the Work of the more basis interconnections between fashion and art with his dissite to disside that we have a source of the steer to disside that upperfers 145 between the steer to disside that upperfers 145 between the steering of the steering rectangular pieces of fabric that utilise the warnhilly of theirs as a logical extension of the painting partice, rather than simply printing a 2D image on a 3D object.

Mark Titmarsh: Oiticica is very interesting in the way he uses colour as object and event, turning paintings into wearable structures that put colour into space and time. Colour in his work becomes something you can walk into, it is spatio-temporal and dynamic, rather than ultra thin and static.

than uttra thin and static. Todd Robinson: Is that your interest in painting on living people? Is it a logical extension of your practice? I would like to know what are the productivities for you, what kind of constraints and potentialities are realised through painting on clothes and models.

Mark Titmarsh: I am interested in finding out where paint can't go, what kind of formal structures and situations will not let painting in. So far I haven't found any. So with this collaboration I am interested to find out any. So with this collaboration I am interested to find our how much painting I can do in relation to the creation of a wearable gament before it will stop me. A syou say it goes much finder that na king an image from a sing it goes much finder that the sing and a minge from a its happening here is much closer to what goes on in the studio, some king to on its model and a mingel in mot here to of making. When I get on a ladder and pour paint from a great height onto the model builgo on the ground I am approximating something I would do in my own ytudio with other materials used a scares, alumnism. Perspex, paper, dust jackets and so on. These are the chance events of liquid turbulence when it impacts on chuce crews, of lagal turbulence when it impacts on the uncers surface of the gennear varged anound the human form. The paint can hook like Polleck, or a Voient attack, or a forth event, a collona between two voient attack, or a forth event, a collona between two outcomes. In all of them somehing of the natural flow and flow of highest from a langing generate. So many small trafts come from the basis themeter of paint and hois, the basis of most them are of paint and hois, the basis of most the attract. So many small trafts come from the paint generation plant.

Todd Robinson: It has been argued that performance practice is now determined by a relationship to tech-nology; in particular that video at anothele medium decouples performance from any need for an audience. Video turns any pelhemeral performance into an enduring document and attriket, such that there is no need to perform live. However in Multi Thing, the live space of the events is presentent, including the human form, the dynamism of paint, the spontaness of at all. The straping of the wholes prediction highlights the significance of the moment in the processes of makings in turns the prediction process inside of at a you as the solution; it is rarely a zone of production, usually a solution; it is rarely a zone of production, usually a solution; it is rarely a zone of production, usually a solution; it is faishing the solution of a solution of elasticohichyle between protagonism and a strengts are lad braze. In a fashion, show the presentation of the solution is that focus on a solution of the solution are lad braze. In a fashion, show the presentation of singlicity are compared by the solution of the solution and region of a fashion show the presentation of singlicity is regorder somewhat. One is to looking at "Subhoo" in that kind of stagging, it foregrounds a staging of fashiong presents plated figure trains the same focus on the garments but through a shift in the same focus on the garment but through a shift in the solution of the stated of stagging in oth a way a series and recalling the act of making in such a way a series of other nexted questions anise, what is introded, what and revealing the act of making in such a way a series of other nested questions arise, what is intended, what is arbitrary, where is the virutuosity of both fashion and painting ? That is what is so captiviating for me about a project like this. It exposes the contingencies of making in contrast to a traditional system of production where the constraints are predetermined and out of view. In Public Fitting, the situation is all potentiality, exposed to viewers and exposed to flux, a flow of action, making garments of paint. Mark Titmarsh: In all of that I am thinking about the infrastructural environment where things take place such as the gallery, the theatre and the catwalk. The more I think about the catwalk the more fascinating it becomes, the more I want to go there with paint. I am fascinated by that little raised structural element that puts the catwalk up above the floor into a space like that place behind the prosenium arch in the theatre and the cinema. But there is more to the theatre and the cinema. But there is more to the catwalk because it comes out at you, is poertrates the invisible wall of the theatre and comes right at your face, right into your world, right into where I am here and now in space and into: It is quite shocking and theiling and totally seducive. It also says a lot about the live nature of what we are doing in this proper. It is not happening in the stado behand the scenes, is is happening in the stadio behand the scenes, is is happening in the gallery on the opening might, with paint doing is supredicitable.
